1 Reinsurance refers to the transfer of all or part of insurance and financial risks associated with the insurance policies underwritten by life insurance companies and other (re)insurers in order to diversify such risks.

2 The planned reinsurance transaction is intended to transfer economic risk and will not alter the relationship between customers and the Organization for Postal Savings, Postal Life Insurance and Post Office Network (hereinafter referred to as the "Management Network") or Japan Post Insurance under the insurance contracts.

3 "Pre-privatization contracts" refer to contracts that Japan Post Insurance has assumed through Reinsurance from the Management Network.

4 The scale of reinsurance is an approximate figure based on current estimates and is subject to change depending on reinsurance contracts and trends in the market environment used as the basis for valuation.
